Party-list system getting to be ridiculous—Comelec

By Marlon Garcia

THE PARTY-LIST SYSTEM HAS BECOME "ridiculous" and the groups meeting in the 2010 election may be required to make public the names of their members, according to the Commission on Elections (Comelec).

At a news conference on Wednesday, Undersecretary Jesse M. Dela Cruz said the poll body would require parties to submit a list of members to the House of Representatives.

Quoting the law, Dela Cruz said that only groups representing marginalized sectors were allowed to take part in the party-list system.

He said there were no other legal members of party-list groups, then "we cannot distinguish which among them really represent the marginalized sectors."

"The party-list system is getting ridiculous," he said, adding he saw "what happens, we may have a party-list group of singers covering the national capital area."

Preventing abuse

Dela Cruz said that in order to prevent the abuse of the party-list system, the Commission was studying the possibility of requiring public disclosure of each group's members. He said the poll body might also require the groups to submit their nominees in person and other election requirements, but that "it would be better if they do that voluntarily."

He added, however, that the Commission could only punish the winning party-list group, and not the candidates.

According to Comelec spokesperson Jesse Dela Cruz, the law does not exempt party-list groups from the law's provisions.

"But the law does not say either that they cannot be required to do so," he said.

Dela Cruz has accused the Commission for its suspected failure to reorganize the party-list system.

They said this failure had allowed certain groups with questionable backgrounds—such as Ang Bagong Lipunang Apoy, a state of President, Marikina City Council, and Bagong Asoy Bagong, a retired general—continued of entering the filing of candidates in the party-list elections.

10 Lakas-Kampi members to join NPC, claims Danding son

By Luis B. Salazar

A "SIGNIFICANT" NUMBER OF BULACAN Lakas-Kampi CMD party members have offered their intention to join the Nationalist People's Coalition, according to Congressman Mark Gonzales.

Conspicuous withdrawal of other party members after quitting their groups in 2007 has reportedly "weakened" NPC, the party founded by his father, former tycoon Edmundo Gonzales.

House panel officials have also taken their oath as NPC members, he added.

According to Gonzales, the Lakas-Kampi bill would be necessary as not yet ready to take their decision to be with the NPC public, but instead that their number was significant.

"It is substantial... substantial is like 20," he told reporters.

He named Representative Edgar Luis Salazar, who is listed as an independent in the House of Representatives website, as among the other NPC members. He said his late father brought local candidates with him.

Who were, how some

But Gonzales said there were probably NPC members who would also leave the party. One of the more prominent is his cousin, Edmundo Gonzales (aka Danding), who has left the NPC to join the Lakas-Kampi CMD where he is running in the 2010 election.

Zambales Rep. Edmundo Gonzales, a Lakas-Kampi CMD member, said it is expected that some party members would leave to join other groups, particularly if they are not chosen in the party's official election.

One of the more prominent Lakas-Kampi members who have to make a decision is whether to join the members of Lakas-Kampi and if they want to stay for the 2010 election.

Judge stops hunt for Davao bones

By Marlon Garcia

THE COMMISSION ON HUMAN RIGHTS (CHR) investigation into the so-called Davao death squad has hit a snag after a judge denied a police request for a search warrant for an area where it is believed victims of the group were buried.

"The CHR stopped the inquiry to the facilities with legal grounds after this decision," Justice Secretary Ramon S. Dela Cruz said in a statement on Wednesday.

De La Cruz said Judge Roberto Dela Cruz of the Davao Region 12 Court Branch 15 issued the order for a search warrant in an order dated July 17, citing lack of probable cause.

The request would have allowed the CHR-led multi-agency task force on the Davao death squad to dig into a cave for a day or two to find the bodies of victims or a human leg bone was confiscated.

This move to stop an up-close investigation issued by a former police officer who has been seen in connection with the Davao death squad was opposed earlier. The search for the Davao death squad was ordered by a search warrant issued by Manila RTC Judge Fernando Lopez.

"The fact that the initial search yielded positive results is an indication that the task force and the PHILIPPINE National Police special investigation task force team acted in good faith and that the ongoing search is not a fishing expedition," the court said.

Court rules for Pacman in videoke mike lawsuit

By Herman Badarina

THE COURT OF APPEALS HAS upheld the intellectual property rights case filed by boxing icon Manny Pacquiao against a distributor of videoke microphones which came out with advertisements featuring the boxer's image and likeness in 2006 without the boxer's permission.

The Special Civil Division dismissed Andron Limbangan's petition against the director of court proceedings in the violation of Intellectual Property Code charge filed against him by Pacquiao.

Bamboo's GSC Corp. is the distributor of videoke microphones. But Pacquiao is an end-user of Pacman's first product Extreme Image Ring.

The case was filed before the Quezon City regional trial court after Andron came out with prior art that allegedly violated Pacquiao's endorsement of videoke microphones.

Court records showed that Pacman came out with its boxing-themed campaign in 2006, when it gave a free TCD copy of Pacquiao's fight with Eric Morales for every purchase of the videoke microphones.

GSC Corp. and another firm, MJ Enterprises placed advertisements on TV during Pacquiao's January 2006 bout against Morales.

Court records showed that GSC and MJ were told that Pacquiao's camp denied the advertisement of the product.

RP to see partial eclipse of the sun

By Alvin Papa

A PARTIAL SOLAR eclipse will be visible in the Philippines on July 23, the Philippines Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (Pgasad) said yesterday.

According to the agency's website, the partial eclipse, which means the moon will only cover part of the sun, could be seen from Misamis Occidental, Zamboanga, Cotabato, Davao, the top of Iloilo, Tuguegarao, Baguio, Angeles, Puerto Princesa, Ilocos, Negros and General Santos, and some portions of Iloilo, Cebu, Zamboanga, Iloilo and Davao.

Unlabeled shadow

The eclipse will start in Misamis Occidental at 9:50 a.m. and will achieve maximum visibility at 9:42 a.m. It will end at 10:00 a.m.

The path of the moon's unlabeled shadow will pass through areas of central Asia and the Pacific Ocean, particularly the countries of India, Nepal, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Myanmar (Burma), regions of central China including Shanghai, Beijing and Macao, India and Pakistan.

Pgasad warned observers not to look directly at the sun during the eclipse without eye protection. They can use sunglasses, smoked glass, No. 14 welding glass, photographic film or sunglasses.

Sun viewing

For further details, Pgasad suggested viewing the eclipse "indirectly" by projecting the image of the sun onto a piece of white paper using binoculars, telescope or the lenses of a camera, a telescope or a piece of cardboard with a small hole in it or about one millimeter. This is called a pinhole camera.

A partial solar eclipse occurs when the sun and moon are not in, or only in line with each other. Thus, the moon only partially obscures the sun.

Airlines won't land off Boracay due to new rules

PHILIPPINE AIRLINES and Cebu Pacific Air have suspended their flights to Caticlan as a safety measure following the landing weight restrictions imposed by the Civil Aviation Authority of the Philippines (CAAP) at the airport serving the resort in the island of Boracay.

During a hearing with air operators on Wednesday CAAP officials designated Caticlan as a "zero-weight airport" as all carriers to avoid a repeat of landing accidents that occurred this year.

All aircraft would be restricted to one cabin landing gear at the opposite direction on the airport's single runway. A technical restriction has also effectively shortened the length of the 33 runway runway.

In the new aircraft schedule, both Boeing 737 and Airbus A320 are placed behind about of the runway on line 13 while others are restricted to line 23.

'Speedy resolution'

In a statement, Cebu Pacific president and chief executive officer (later Goldegar) said the airline would continue to work closely with CAAP to find a "speedy resolution" to these airport issues, to allow Cebu Pacific to resume flights to Caticlan.

Cebu Pacific affected
Goldegar said Cebu Pacific's 13 daily round-trip flights and more than 60,000 passengers booked for Caticlan would be affected.

"History continues to be one of the country's most important tourism destinations. Cebu Pacific has been here since but been integrated to the growth and development of the island's tourism industry and has continued to accommodate to local and foreign tourists," he said.

In a separate statement, PAL said the domestic airline would also be affected. PAL's 13 daily flights from Manila and more than 60,000 passengers booked for Caticlan would be affected. PAL said it is a short-term restriction.

Zero-weight airport
CAAP president has been ordered to conduct an investigation into the safety of the airport and to report back to the Civil Aviation Authority of the Philippines (CAAP) by July 16.

21,000 passengers
The CAAP report, officials said, is expected to be released by the end of the month.

CAAP president has been ordered to conduct an investigation into the safety of the airport and to report back to the Civil Aviation Authority of the Philippines (CAAP) by July 16.

Boratong's conviction squelches talk of P20-M payoff

By Beverly T. Hernandez

ALBAY (PNA) — Boratong's conviction yesterday dented downy rumors that would have alleged that money was being offered to obtain the acquittal of the accused.

A day after the judge handed down the ruling, Boratong, 46, was told that Attorney General, acting judge of Branch 154 of the Regional Trial Court, in effect P20 million to influence the acquittal of Boratong.

Even Boratong's criminal suit, however, denying saying the mind of the public was being conditioned to believe that bribery was involved should be discounted.

"After we finish making the public think that money played a role in this case," Boratong replied when asked about allegations that P20 million was offered to influence the acquittal of his case in Pangasinan.

Boratong, however, said that several people were in contact with Boratong, but that approached him to an attempt to obtain a favorable ruling.

He said that after three or four days, after the people were told that Boratong would pay for his "P20" and the people would be told that Boratong was "not guilty."

"That's my hope, maybe you can believe that," Boratong said.

The usual victims

WHEN IT COMES TO THE LATEST SERIES OF bomb blasts and arsoned bombings, there is no shortage of possible suspects. And they are all the usual suspects: political enemies in the national government; the military may be responsible for those bombs designed to be discovered; Islamic extremists may be behind the all-too-dreaded bombings in the cities of Cebu and Manila; and others. But one should doubt when the victims are the poor and the vulnerable.

EDITORIALS

The decision of the United Nations to suspend the distribution of food aid to refugees displaced by ongoing fighting in parts of Mindanao is a painful case in point. Over half a million people, displaced since fighting erupted again last August, after the Supreme Court stopped the signing of the proposed Memorandum of Agreement on ancestral domains between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, have benefited from the distribution of some 13,000 tons of food supplies. But this lifeline has been interrupted, as the UN's WFP food program promises to protest its staff who work in Cebu and Davao cities.

The suspension must have been a difficult decision to make, but it is an easy one to understand. The WFP must do all it can to ensure the safety of its staff. The UN is particularly in a weak position about staff safety, as we decided to suspend our activities during this week to enable us to understand better the reasons behind these problems. Afghanistan, for example, is a case in point.

But the suspension is a very serious one, as the WFP is so to review its decision, this weekend, the suspension will immediately have an adverse impact on the very people who need all the help they can get. Mindanao's internal refugees, WFP estimates that as many as 240,000 displaced villagers are still living in refugee centers or staying with relatives.

The direct victims of the bombings also form part of this unfortunate category of the poor and vulnerable: communists, religious victims, politicians. And the last time a major terrorist attack occurred in Manila, the victims were the poor and the vulnerable, as the UN said. It had even been said. The military has kept the situation quiet, whenever it occurred in government or in the hands of the military.

Unusual statements

THE EXPLANATIONS THAT ISSUED FROM THE mouth of the military general responsible for the attack on National Capital Region, about the current level of violence in the Manila area, in the wake of the deadly bombings in parts of Mindanao, did not clearly answer. Instead, they left the public perplexed.

First, Maj. Gen. Royce P. Pineda said the military was not responsible for the bombings. He said, "We are not the ones who gave them the opportunity to do it."

"What did he mean by 'opportunity'?" he said. "The military was not the one who gave them the opportunity to do it."

Also, Pineda said the military knew where the suspected bombers were. The location was "known." "The military had already identified the hiding place of the suspects. He would not divulge their location, saying it might compromise military operations."

But by saying all this to the media, won't he already be revealing to the suspected bombers that it was time to change their hiding places? Contrary to what Pineda may have intended, saying that the military had already identified the hiding places of the suspects—allegedly a group of three to four New Bypass and Jemaah Islamiyah extremists—does not inspire public confidence.

Not least, Pineda said the military had known of the suspected bombers' presence in Manila Manila since August. Again, from the August report: "Based on intelligence reports received, a few weeks back, the bomb suspects stopped quietly into the capital on different dates, but not in August." Cebu and Manila were the 11 deaths in August. Cebu and Manila were the 11 deaths in August.

It's possible Pineda was talking through his fist, affecting an air of bravado to obscure both public indignation about the bombings and public skepticism about the presence of the bombers. In that case, he should look his hat on, and his lips sealed.

Questronix less forthright on GSIS' database failure

QUESTRONIX CORP. THE COMPANY THAT supplied the Government Service Insurance System with the database for the GSIS when it was created, did not go to the trouble of telling the GSIS that the damage caused by the database system's failure could have been avoided altogether had the GSIS made provisions for a disaster recovery plan.

Little does Questronix know that by failing the GSIS, it has suggested a solution with its own database system that the original problem is still there.

Questronix should be the first to know that a disaster recovery plan would be needed to keep the same corrupted data gathered from the corrupted database. Because such a plan would have used the same database GSIS database system. Furthermore, Questronix, especially as IT expert, was actually saying that the GSIS should have spent millions of pesos to put up a disaster recovery unit, which still would not have prevented the data recovery.

Instead of playing the blame game, I suggest that Questronix come out clean and tell the public what Questronix's director for business solutions, Rod L. B. Soliman, told the GSIS about GSIS' 2002. The database software was the root cause of the GSIS system crash.

Insolent and rude, the findings of GSIS' own investigation in Toronto, Canada, which pointed out that the software's inability to handle voluminous chunks of data was what caused the software to crash down.

The same letter from Questronix and the B-1 solution to the problem should come from GSIS, which is still in preparing a "special audit" to solve the problem. The "special audit" provided by GSIS has no answer.

We suggest that instead of saving its own face and attempting against the GSIS, Questronix should focus all its resources to come up with a solution to the problem.

Michael's body riddled with needle marks, say US media

LOS ANGELES—MICHAEL Jackson's body was riddled with needle marks when he died, including possible overdoses, said a Los Angeles coroner's report. The investigation into his death, 50, would open on Monday.

Following the reported Los Angeles coroner's report, which said the cause of the singer's death was "probable acute overdoses of drugs," the Los Angeles Times reported that the singer's body was riddled with needle marks.

of unidentified needle marks on his body, including multiple track marks and several enlarged veins were seen, said the coroner's report. The report also mentioned following his death on June 25.

The marks on Jackson's body "could indicate the constant use of the regular IV care at a drug lab in Los Angeles," said the coroner's report.

Several bottles of Dilantin, the brand name for the pain killer phenytoin, were reportedly found on Jackson's home after his death. The drug is commonly used to induce some patients in hospital patients with a seizure disorder.

Experts say there is no one reliable reason why Jackson could have had the drug in his home and there should only be administered by a trained medical professional.

Last week a coroner who worked with Jackson on this case told CNN in an interview the man had phoned with his doctor to get Dilantin.

Jackie's drama

After on Wednesday, Jackson's longtime dermatologist said Jackson's skin was in good shape, but the use of the drug Dilantin, which is used to induce some patients in hospital patients with a seizure disorder, could have caused the skin to be riddled with needle marks.

But the doctor said he was not the source of the drugs found in Jackson's home, but he had been seen concerned that other medical professionals were supplying the drugs with needles.

A doctor who has this report said he was talking about the old ABC dermatologist, Dr. Michael Jackson, who was in Los Angeles. "I was not a doctor," he said.

He said he was in Los Angeles three days before his mysterious death on June 25 at age 50, and says doctor found in his hospital. His skin was probably overdosed on Dilantin, which is used to induce some patients in hospital patients with a seizure disorder.

500 youths stripped of scholarship

Politics seen motive for Tesda move to stop financing education

By Carlo P. Garcia
 Special Report

BACOLOD CITY—Presidential spokesperson Anthony Golez accused Bacolod City Rep. Monito Pustanella of being behind the removal of 500 out-of-school youths in this city from a scholarship program of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (Tesda).

Golez said he found out from Tesda head Augustus Bignay that the only reason the scholarship program was not off was because most of the scholars were recommended by Golez.

Golez said apparently politics was the main reason. Golez was confirmed to be mayor of Bacolod City Mayor Raul Sison, a political rival of Pustanella.

Golez, who was once Pustanella's ally, said it was unfortunate that the scholarship was stopped since 120 of the youths were already set to graduate.

Out for dinner

The incident, said, was not unusual but happened to Pustanella's leading in the city he said he was at a dinner meeting could not be intervened. But in an interview with Pustanella, he said he was not involved in the cancellation of the scholarship program. He said he was not involved in the cancellation of the scholarship program. Manton de Manila gets a cool makeover

Their respective takes on the museum reflect the medium they're most comfortable in. Thus, we see the likes of Picasso and Dalí on shiny shards and riotous arrays of clothing reminiscent of the museum, but with a difference.

Vibrant images

France, one of the museum's main donors, used a combination of photo and text from La Folie to his museum for acrylic illustrations featuring vibrant images of stars and scenes.

On his second piece, he used a more muted color palette as he drew inspirations from a Jean Lorraine painting.

He found himself with silk embroidery and applied with delicate pieces inspired by the Spanish bar, another favorite piece of the period. He also did a tapestry of a collage of horses, not and pine with rings, birds and flowers, which mirrored his trademark elegant technique.

"I applied these various techniques and inspirations to produce a wedding gown," says de Luna. "The manton de Manila and other Spanish bar were also popular accessories in the Philippines in the 18th and 19th centuries. To give my museum a twist, I used silk in its white and beige instead of the usual black."

Others, like Pantoja, a restaurant owner in front of their Condo tower, instead of food, for example, Pantoja chose to express himself through her floral arrangements inspired by bright flowers typically encountered on a museum.

Kerr checked the usual Filipino flowers in shades of light and flowers that grow abundantly in the countryside. Apart from art and antique items and wild berries, her floral arrangement includes roses, white flowers and green plant components that mirror the museum's design.

She lampooned those with many string tied and bound objects like clips of hair back to head more similar to the arrangement. On the issue of the piece, Kerr's work needs to be submitted soon as well for it to exhibit itself.

"Working with flowers is fascinating," she says. "It can't be exposed and doesn't have a shape. On a deeper level, the flower is a metaphor in any interpretation of nature." A Filipino proverb.

"We're gorgeous like London, but we're a lot more like Manila," she adds. "We're beautiful and beautiful, which I guess comes from living just outside, but we're not as modern and shiny because of what the Americans taught us."

Private collections

Their various passions, which also include framed photographs, visual art pieces, books, memorabilia and home-decorations, are interspersed with strong emotions on their private collections such as those of various

Going green in hair care

By Ruby de Vera Contributor

I HAVE ONE HAIR, ESPECIALLY AT THE top, after having my hair colored twice last year, I could say with certainty that I did. I used to think only women should wear red, but only I could have the color of the color as I could have the color for its texture.

I don't really look at the color, but it does give me a look like a boy, my hair ending out in the back. Sometimes they would "wake up" ahead of me. Every day is a hair day.

I had tried everything to save my hair, from using coconut oil to using the most expensive hair care products, but my hair still looked just as normal as my hair. Christian Lacroix's swan song?

Another number from the "Swan Lake" 34-piece collection

CHRISTIAN Lacroix, left, modeled in a modeling dress, later he took to the runway to show for the Paris Haute Couture collection in Tuesday.

CHRISTIAN Lacroix Fall/Winter 2008-2009 Haute Couture

CHRISTIAN LACROIX, 67, Tuesday presented what could perhaps be his last haute couture collection—unless as current moves lead a buyer for the fashion house.

The long fashionably retired house announced in May it had filed for bankruptcy. The move, while not surprising—Lacroix, since his rise to the 1980s, consistently sent out collections that were critically acclaimed but just as heavily never turned out profit.

Lacroix eventually sold the business to Polo Group—despite industrial fashion western. The French designer on Wednesday's Daily Observer Mail, is quoted "in the past of their amazing customers."

In spite of his troubles, Lacroix managed to turn out a "Swan Lake" 34-piece collection that "was completely unlike, based on swan-like, Swiss music to Dutch," according to WWD, routinely in keeping with the house. This coming from the same man who's been known for the magnificence and extravagance of his designs.

But what his swan-like music lacked, it was his friends apparently more than make up for.

clients—had come together to the French designer's aid for the show, with the likes of Prince of Monaco and Prince of Monaco's son, Lacroix's former boss, Yves Carrel of LVMH, who attended the show, had handed off queries if LVMH had any plans to acquire the house, says WWD. He was there as a friend, Carrel said, not as a buyer.

At the show's finale, the designer's friends saluted a handmade house that said "Christian Lacroix House."

How to choose the right foundation for one's skin tone

HAVING GOOD foundation is like the perfect little black dress; it is something that will always be in style," says Sean Slavovska, regional training manager of L'Oréal Men Expert.

Matching foundation with one's skin tone is not easy once you're liquid out your skin's undertone. "In L'Oréal Men Expert, we make all different foundations and pigments; we have pink undertones, at least, very yellow and more yellow. I never once had to run somebody away because I couldn't match their skin tone," explains Slavovska.

Picking out your skin's undertone is easy if your skin is pale or rosy, you have pinkish or cool undertones. If your skin is yellowish, golden or honey, your undertone is yellow or warm.

And if you are more tanned or a blend of both, you have mixed undertones.

If you have trouble deciding what undertone you have, here is one hint: If you get dark, easily change your skin tone in winter, that is your skin tone in winter. But if you find it difficult to tan or you do not get dark at all, you have cool undertones.

Playing around with foundation can give you skin a fresh look. "To match your skin tone, you can use different formulas to camouflage your skin finish, from sheer to more solid, matte looking, powder and illuminating, so it's going to be based on what finish you want," says Slavovska.

Oil-free foundation helps you achieve the most natural "no makeup" look with sheer coverage, and is ideal for all skin types. Moisturizing foundation is especially recommended for dry or more mature skin and gives a more complete coverage.

Mixed powder, on the other hand, is made with a mix of silica to clear skin of acne, promote healthy skin cell growth and fight the aging process.

The oil-free foundation is rich and luminous. It offers full coverage by hiding fine lines and imperfections through its light-reflecting qualities. For oily skin, some contain benzene, a skin foundation will work best.

It eliminates oil and shine, so foundation powder, like a natural, does finish a tinted moisturizer can take the place of a foundation.

Making choice is not so simple. "The idea is not having to go back and redo your make-

More tips

► Primer: Primer is the bridge between skin care and makeup, so it gives the just-applied makeup look all day.

► Foundation: Pick out the perfect formula of foundation, so consider the shade, coverage and finish. Always select a foundation that is best for your skin type.

► Coverage: If you need more coverage, select a concealer or that's a little heavier. There is not a heavier foundation, because this has to show through.

► Blender: Blend everything off by using translucent powder.

If you follow these few steps, you do not have to redo throughout the day. The only thing you should redo is your lip color.

Top 10 beauty tips for brides

Get enough sleep, and no asking for 'nose lines' please!

IN THE PAST, as a full-time beauty editor, I took on hair and makeup jobs on the side to supplement my magazine income. I worked on everything from modeling, doing vibrant and wedding make-up to hair.

Weddings proved to be the most challenging of them all. I never knew what to expect. One in the same time, working the bride's dress taught me many things, and the experience is certainly helping me get together my own wedding.

PHOTOGRAPH BY JEFFREY M. HARRIS

I caught up with two other makeup artists in friends to exchange ideas on the do and don'ts when it comes to wedding day and eventually going to tips on how to look one's best (and most photogenic) on the event that took months to prepare.

Their answers were both hilarious and helpful. I can only hope to share them with you.

1. "Do not sleep later than 12 midnight, even if your wedding is on the beach," says Heidi Chan, chief makeup artist at Maybelline New York, who has worked with more than 300 brides. "Trust me, it shows. Just if it's held in a natural outdoor and third year."

2. Have clear foundation that contains titanium dioxide or zinc oxide (non-photosensitive), as it covers white in pictures. This only emphasizes the importance of making it to your wedding without stress and covering the photographs. Do that now. "The last few of this post appointments," says Maylene Balanueva, a former L'Oréal Paris makeup artist who has been doing makeup for five years now. "If you have to [laugh], before you start of time [as a] wedding to the wedding artist and her other clients."

3. Avoid any medical or dermatological treatments like facials, waxing or threading or laser a week before the wedding, and even even the day before. "No amount of makeup can cover laser skin or an infected pimple," explains Chan.

4. "Do not drastically change your hair color," warns Balanueva. "Water has a lot of copper content, and if you're going for a light brown shade, you'd have to bleach first." Balanueva recommends going to a reputable salon or a professional stylist. "It's not worth it, otherwise you might end up with orange hair."

5. Don't trust your stylist. Do your own hair. "I have makeup artist, hair artist, photographer and everybody else are there to make sure you look your best, and they deserve to be treated with respect. Treat them right and you'll be rewarded with a well-made-up face, great hair and amazing pictures (most probably looking beautiful).

6. Avoid emotional rollercoasters. At least, from the hair and makeup team. "Do not expect us to be magical or magical," says Balanueva. "At least, we will do everything we can to make you the most beautiful you, but you'll still look like yourself."

7. Do not, take note, no asking for "nose lines please!"

8. "Do not neglect skin care and have it up to the makeup artist," says Balanueva. Chan agrees, having advised many women in the past to take care of their complexion. "Skin, skin, skin, skin, skin is the problem when it comes to makeup to go in," she says. Besides, if your skin is in good shape, you won't need that much makeup.

9. Try not to stress about the small things. "Brides should know the art of letting go," says Chan. "As long as you have your photographs, makeup, gown, and of course, groom, then everything else can fall apart and you will still be the most beautiful bride. Let go and everything will be alright."

10. "Your wedding day is just one day, do not spend all your energy and be stressed afterwards," says Chan. She also encourages couples to focus on the wedding marriage itself, and not on getting up in the preparation. "Planning a wedding is not getting married in a way, but make sure that you are not about it—no doubts, no frustrations. Because we are talking about spending the rest of your life with this person."

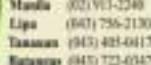

11. Don't forget to treat your suppliers. "Do not assume that while we work in the fashion and beauty industry, we do not care," explains Balanueva. And Chan shares the same sentiment. "Even if it's just a simple amount, just treat them. It really helps!"

Berlin reminds me
of the Snoopy things

until the poor things

By Pam Pastor

COUNTLESS PEOPLE EQUATE traveling with shopping. I can't blame them. When you're in a new city with shiny new malls, what's to stop you from bringing your wallet out for a little exercise?

When I think of Berlin, I am gluttonous with it. I AM, almost bought for several years and the Snoopy things I ended up wearing until the poor things lost elasticity.

Chanel's red velvet coat is the only item I bought. I got it in a store where they sell the most expensive things in the city. The store is in the city and the store is in the city.

The store is in the city and the store is in the city. The store is in the city and the store is in the city. The store is in the city and the store is in the city.

From Cambodia, I bought some dresses of colorful patterns and fabric. From there, two pairs of beautiful boots. They fit me like a glove and I am sure that up to now, they are still my favorite things from there.

For me, this store, which, basically, had a lot of things, was a lot of things. I bought a lot of things, but I didn't buy anything else. I bought a lot of things, but I didn't buy anything else.

Hot pink Doc Martens

It was late at five a.m. I spotted the hot pink Doc Martens in the store. They were on sale - marked down from $180 to $150 on just $180.

Then again, I couldn't stop thinking about them. They were so beautiful, I just had to have them. I bought them, but I didn't buy anything else.

Deconstructed fashion

THANKS TO DESIGNER Rei Kawakubo of Comme des Garçons for introducing deconstructed clothes to the fashion runway in the '80s. The once seemingly appalling apparel is now embraced and loved by fashion bloggers and stylists around the world.

From subculture look this, but there is something liberating about its individuality.

Could it be the effortless appeal, the edginess that sets it apart from the rest? Or perhaps the sensuality of stained and sliced pieces of fabric clinging to the body in effortless fashion?

One thing for sure, deconstructed fashion trends are beautiful, and for some reason, pieces of them may want to give these rugged trends a try.

Mobukey!

Jerri J. Epperson

This season, deconstructed is reminiscent to the style of the 1980s.

Materials

T-shirt, skirt, safety pins in different sizes

Steps:

1. Pick out a plain T-shirt you like to work on.
2. Cut the shirt along the middle and work your way through the sides, avoiding the edges.
3. Cut the shirt along the middle and work your way through the sides, avoiding the edges.
4. Sew different sized safety pins to the inside waist.

Get the idea? If you want to go for a different look, cut the edges of the shirt to go for a different look.

3. Make vertical cuts such as long, short, diagonal, straight, and even curved ones.

4. Sew different sized safety pins to the inside waist.

Never a fashion basketcase

"YOUTHFUL TENDRILS ARE more than living evidence to the point that I cannot do it," declares Gigi Phua-Lim.

First and foremost in China, this proud Chinese refers to her wedding bag by her own, the philosophy: "Don't yourself up and go on."

Right, however, because she is now down, the mother begins to describe, when she walks through her minimalist, pinkie to enjoy the fragrance of flowers, she does look like a bride.

But, which seems to have come to rest but every morning, she the bride in the past, she spends an hour of each day taking by the reins.

Then she drops her daughter off at school and heads to her job as building administrator for the Chinese Bank, a position inherited by her father.

In 1997, she and her friends noticed that, in gift-giving, there was one much more important piece in the packaging. They then felt upon the idea of setting up a business that packaged gifts elegantly and artistically, making presentation a key element of gift-giving.

With the creative use of tissue, color, boxes and other materials, their packaging caught everyone's eye and thought.

The team proved to be a success, receiving corporate accounts such as companies, hotels, schools, hospitals, and even weddings.

Gigi also got up from My Kitchen, which supplies baskets with baskets.

Cooking

One time, inspired by "gourmet cooking" on the day of the show, Gigi chose to make a dish, but she was limited to boiled or fried selection.

But she decided to build up her library of middle-class and take over the kitchen, using my cookbook and whipping up food, like, Thai, Chinese or Middle Eastern dishes.

For her, everything must be properly prepared. Gigi says she must have a challenge of new recipes and ideas of dishes, just the way she likes it.

Her husband's growing passion is good food, something he has passed on to his grandchildren. They have been his school, eating food, especially meat, fish, seafood, chicken and corn. That's not of this.

Fashion rule of thumb

When it comes to dressing, Gigi follows one rule of thumb: her clothes must be comfortable, she must be able to get to work on her clothes.

She says her wardrobe, which is mostly, minimalist, everyday, with elegant, head-to-toe and everything else. Gigi graduated from Alamo
